Tips for writing a nomination:

Open with the important information

Provide clear and specific statements that outline why your nominee is worthy of an Australia Day Award. What activities or actions stand out, what have they accomplished that makes a difference in the community? How do they inspire or motivate others in the community?

Consider your audience

Spell out acronyms and avoid using jargon, overly complex language or terms that may not be familiar to the general public.

Share their story

Tell us about the person behind the nomination. What motivates them to make a difference? What personal challenges have they overcome in their life? Why do they inspire others? How does this person make you feel?

Use real-world examples that demonstrate why your nominee is an inspiring role model. We want to know the stories of their life and the impact they have made.

Stick to the selection criteria

Our panel is looking for people who make a significant voluntary contribution to our community, who are role models, and who have demonstrated a strong commitment to improving the short or long-term wellbeing of others, so ensure your nomination addresses these criteria.

Tell the facts

Support your nomination with hard facts and reliable statistics. Can you provide specific measures of this person's success? Attach copies of newspaper or magazine articles or other supporting documentation.

Aim for quality, not quantity

A long nomination isn't always a better nomination. Try to keep your sentences short and concise, and avoid repetition.

Remember referees

Don't forget to fill in the referee field, naming someone else that supports your nomination, who is aware of the nominee's achievements and will be able to provide any additional information if required.
