

Metropolitan convenience, rural lifestyle

Imagine living nestled on the banks of the Murray River amid irrigated orchards and vineyards with arid red soil and sand dunes as a backdrop. Mildura really is an oasis in our state's north-west. The regional centre offers residents an enviable lifestyle mix of cosmopolitan vibrancy and country charm in a Mediterranean climate.

Housing remains affordable, parking easy and shopping diverse and plentiful, with many of the nation's major chain stores having outlets across the city.

The region is home to many award-winning eateries, making the most of fresh, locally-grown produce including wine-grapes, almonds, pistachios, olives, carrots, asparagus and citrus fruit.

Outdoor lovers will revel in the wide array of sports and recreational activities on offer including golf, water-skiing, swimming, lawn bowls, football, shooting and tennis just to name a few.

Arts and cultural activities are also embraced, with residents given many chances to attend festivals, concerts and productions.

If small-town life is more your style, Mildura Rural City Council spans an area of more than 20,000 square kilometres and includes a dozen warm, friendly and close-knit rural communities such as Merbein, Murrayville, Red Cliffs and Ouyen.

Ideal location

Located on the Murray River in north-west Victoria, the Mildura region is 550kms north-west of Melbourne, 400kms north-east of Adelaide and 1080kms west of Sydney.

Work-life balance

Spend less time travelling to and from work and more time embracing sport and recreation, regional festivals, award-winning restaurants, vibrant shopping and delicious fresh produce.

Fly in, fly out

Regional, not remote

Mildura is a vibrant rural city in the heart of a remarkable region. While it offers the sense of peace and community synonymous with rural living, the region is far from remote. Getting to and from the area is easy. Board a plane, bus or train, or drive yourself along one of the major highways that enter the city from all directions. Located at the junction of three Australian states, residents of the Mildura region are spoilt for choice when it comes to visiting capital cities and regional centres for work or play.

Driving

Located at the junction of three major highways – the Sturt, Calder and Silver City – Mildura is easily accessible by road. The major roads which link Mildura to its closest capital cities are well-maintained with regular over-taking lanes and plenty of interesting towns and sights to break up a trip.

Flying

Mildura is home to one of Australia's busiest regional airports.

Victoria's capital city Melbourne can be reached via a direct flight in less than one hour, with three major airlines operating daily flights to and from Mildura. Regular direct flights to Sydney (130 minutes), Adelaide (65 minutes) and Broken Hill (55 minutes) are also available. A multi-million dollar terminal upgrade at Mildura Airport was completed in 2013.

Employment and Career Paths

Whether you're looking to further your professional career, start a new business, expand your skills or forge a new job path, the Mildura region is the place to do it. Our dynamic and diverse economic environment offers employment opportunities across a broad industry platform. Traditionally, the local workforce has been concentrated in the retail, manufacturing, viticulture, horticulture, agriculture and tourism sectors. But a recent wave of investment and string of major projects has increased the demand for skilled workers in the areas of mining, trades, aquaculture and health services.

Finding a job in the Mildura region

You will find a selection of employment opportunities available in our region listed on major national jobs websites.

But some employers do not use these sites when recruiting. Instead they advertise positions in local newspapers, on their own websites or through one of the various local employment and recruitment agencies, listed to the left

The local economy and workforce

Recent statistical data shows the Mildura region has a labour force of more than 21,000. The agricultural sector is a major employer together with a strong retail sector. Manufacturing also plays a key employment role. There are many manufacturing operations that feed off agricultural production in the region. Education and healthcare are also major employers, which combined with retail indicate a strong community services sector in Mildura. For more information about the local economy and employment data, contact Mildura Development Corporation.

Excellent education & childcare

The Mildura region offers a wide array of high quality and varied education and training opportunities, from early childhood through to tertiary studies, for you and your family.

Personalised care and attention in a safe and accessible regional setting means many of our students have an edge over their city counterparts. Importantly, the region's major education and training providers recognise the need for training and expertise specific to skills shortage professions such as construction, horticulture, conservation, land management, health care, hospitality and a host of other trades.

Playgroups & Kindergartens

There are a range of different playgroups operating throughout the region where parents and children can meet and socialise with others. Playgroups promote friendship, support, independence and learning and usually offer a range of activities including creative play, music, imaginative play, crafts, reading and other literacy activities.

Affordable and appealing housing

Whether you choose to rent, buy, build or invest, the Mildura region offers some of the most affordable, and appealing housing in the state. Median house prices are among the lowest in Victoria – less than half those in Melbourne, and cheaper than other regional cities like Ballarat, Bendigo, Wangaratta, Wodonga and Shepparton. From sprawling rural acreages and modern family homes to country houses and compact inner city units, there is a real estate solution for every lifestyle.

While the majority of the region's housing stock is located within the city of Mildura itself, the smaller towns scattered throughout the region are an ideal option for those seeking the lifestyle of a true country town. There are also many opportunities to enjoy the peace and quiet of life on the land with rural properties in a range of sizes available to rent or buy.

There are many new residential developments and a range of high-quality house and land packages available too, plus local builders and architects who can help you design and build your dream home.

House and unit prices have either risen slightly or remained over recent years, with the median price for a house currently sitting at $255,000 and $175,000 for a unit, making the region a solid investment choice.

Renting

Renting can be a good option while you settle into a new area. The Mildura region offers a broad range of rental properties catering for all needs from temporary accommodation, to self-contained and fully-serviced executive units and apartments. To find the latest rental properties and short term accommodation contact a local estate agent, or search online. The median rental price for a house in Mildura is currently $280pw while the median rental price for a unit is $220pw.
